Science Spectacular 2013,

Saturday 2 November 2013, 11am – 4pm, the University of Manchester, Whitworth Hall & Manchester Museum, on Oxford Road. (Free, drop in event)

If you haven't heard – the Manchester Science Festival is coming and The University of Manchester is playing host to a Science Spectacular!

With more than 200 researchers from across the University, this is one event you won't want to miss. Explore inside of a nuclear reactor, go on a journey through the hidden body, take a closer look at the moon, and snuggle up to some unusual creepy crawlies. Over 40 interactive, hands on science activities – fun for all the family.

Meet the scientists and engineers behind the amazing research at Manchester. There will be lots of activities suitable for children of all ages, including face painting and lucky science dips, and there's plenty to keep adults entertained too!

So bring your mum and dad, your kids, and your friends to this free event. Take part in our fun science challenges and become a Manchester Science Star!

We hope to see you there! On your way see if you can spot our secret scientists along Oxford Road!
